Program Name: Johns Hopkins Combined Internal Medicine-Pediatrics

Size of intern class: 4

Application Process: ERAS

Number and types of letters of recommendations: ERAS typically allows up to 4 letters. We encourage you to send as many letters as you can from letter writers who know you well. We certainly welcome department letters from both Internal Medicine and Pediatrics, but we know that may not be possible.

Application review/invite timeline: We hope to start inviting applicants at the end of October.

Approach to Step 1: We take a holistic approach to your application. We interview applicants who subscribe to our mission- to produce leaders in urban health primary care. Your personal statement should reflect that commitment. With that said, we have never invited an applicant who failed Step 1. We infrequently invite applicants who have scored below 200.

Approach to Step 2: Refer to our answer for Step 1. If you did not score as well on Step 1, we hope to see you improve significantly on Step 2. We are well aware that many applicants may not have taken Step 2 by the time they apply. Receiving an interview is not contingent on having taken Step 2.

Post-Interview Communication Policy: We do not initiate individual communication with applicants after they interview. The program directors and residents love to answer questions from applicants after the interview day if the applicant initiates the communication. With only virtual interviews, you may have many more questions, and we look forward to answering them, but we do not expect applicants to communicate with us in the post-interview period. Communication with us does not affect the rank.
